

For any of us, looking back is always easier than looking ahead, it just doesn't get us anywhere. It does provide a glimpse of what anchors us, and in this case the Yar-Craft brand. A glimpse of the passion, product and service that you will care about in your life. As we look ahead with the optimism of any post-election year, no different than ever, it's still as clear as mud. One of the things we do know is that a break away exists in the outdoors.

The outdoors provides us that escape from the grind. Fishing gives us peace. You see, it's not about the catch, it's about quality time, it's about relationships and it's about the tick. Through just one tick you can transform a person, they will become an angler, one who's then looking for that next tick. That "tick" is not something any of us can adequately describe.

Of course, you can get that tick a lot of places on the water. That's what makes it all a wonderful experience no matter where it inspired any of us. You don't have to have a new rig, you can get that tick on the creek bank. That's where this all started for many of us, on a dirt bank somewhere. For some it may be a pond and for others, lakes were their first fishing memory. My first memories were forged on Double Creek in a square back canoe, running yo-yos with my Grandfather. There were others, but those were special.

As we experience life's many markers, many encompass time with a skyline. Sunrises and sunsets are framed in our minds, as fishing offers us a horizon to horizon view. The spaces seem unlimited as we realize those breathtaking moments on the water. That limitless experience should help us all in our view of our limitations in life. The potentials are endless and hopefully our lives are enriched by that thought process. Whether that be fulfillment, or restoring our souls, those memories are abundant on the water.

So, I'm going to look back a few years to an earlier time for Yar-Craft. We bought the brand in the fall of 2011. The Suthers family was looking for a way to carry that tradition Jack Dallman started in 1969 forward. Their ownership was 8 years, on the tail of Jack's passage. They had a couple of options to sell it, though both would have only merged the present offering into their own brand(s). Yar-Craft would have ended. Corey had Yar-Craft restarted in 2004 out of his love for the brand, and it was teetering to grow.

Corey and I had a conversation before the 2009-10 recession about us acquiring Yar-Craft, and in September of 2011, that happened again. One evening Corey emailed me asking if we would be interested. It was as if there were divine intervention as that evening we had involved ourselves in a walleye product conversation with an industry executive, over dinner. While we were eating dinner, Corey sent that memo and one has to feel divine intervention played in.

We had a conversation that next day, and later that month we came to an agreement. He and his father both fished and loved Yar-Craft. They had a difficult situation and seeing it go forward was important to them. We closed that 2012 model year with Yar-Craft rejuvenated to a previous level of success, one that we would continue to grow on. That next phase was when we chose to change things in a similar fashion. As in March of 2015, we handed our reigns off to Correct Craft to see both of our brands go forward.

BRAVE THE

We see now these opportunities as that horizon to horizon view we needed. And the brand progressed from where it was before at all those junctures.

Today the lineup is buoyed by a freshened hull series, good new top cap designs, and a construction method that mimics the tried and true Bass Cat line. We worked hard to improve the line and the new 210 TFX is our latest drive to the future. This model was added to the multiple award winning 219 TFX, a former NMMA Innovation Award winner, at the Minneapolis show. And the Boating Industry "Top Product" 2095 BTX backtroller. That 219 TFX built on the non-traditional floor plan that the 2095 BTX opened a door for.

Behind that lays the always consistent 186 TFX model that has the largest in category cockpit. The line is broad when and you consider the offering others have, we seem to meet those core walleye needs.

All through this we melded it into our Bass Cat way of building and offering the finest in service. This has helped us to reach a customer satisfaction level that Yar-Craft has never seen. Yar-Craft continues to be what we dreamed of in those early days, and we hope that both the Southers and Dallman families are both proud of where the line is today.

Today we have the best in top-tier raw materials, new designs, great dealership support, quality anglers who hold multiple AOY accomplishments in 219's, and a customer base that is expanding in its loyalty to this brand.

Our dealership base has grown and we have added several Yar-Craft dealers to those stalwarts of the brand. That gives each of you an improved consumer value as those are the true support staff for those at home.

The next phase is one where most walleye anglers don't exercise their options and they often overlook the potential. That is in our Quest incentive program. All of you, as Yar-Craft owners, are able to receive incentives in those sanctioned event you compete in. Sure some take full advantage, as "Chaz" has done, as have several others. Most overlook the potential to participate in this program and receive up to $7,500 in Quest incentives. The full rules are online and we will be glad to walk you through it.

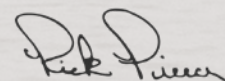

That closes a loop for us as we want those reading this memo to weigh what their needs are in a multi-species rig. It's often a short term view in a long term game, looping the years into this cycle. All for someone to enjoy a product and have among the best experiences in the multi-species world. From customer service, to fishing and then to the product itself, we hope you find that we meet your needs.

We started this looking for that "tick", and some would feel we are luring you in to "set the hook". Those who have known us for decades in the bass world, they know where our passion lies. It is all about a quality product, and culture and the outdoors. We want and your family to enjoy being in the outdoors. We hope you focus on the sport of fishing and enjoy our leisure time with a passion for that "tick". That's where it all starts!

Thank you for considering our brand.

Good Fishin',

Rick

WAVE-CRUSHING ENTRY

An aggressive entry and strategically tapered deadrise work together to slice through waves with precision, ensuring you can stay on course and maintain control as you approach the next set. Spray is turned down and away to keep you dry and comfortable, even in challenging conditions. Additionally, the hull's exceptional stability provides a balanced platform, giving everyone onboard a secure and steady experience without compromising the unmatched rough-water performance Yar-Craft is renowned for.

FISHING PLATFORM

Boat response and behavior while fishing is just as important as our famous ride. The ability to maintain position in adverse conditions is paramount for a successful day. Input from serious fishermen, including several from the R&D department, continues to evolve the lineup.

FULL-WIDTH COCKPITS

The trollers appreciate the full-width layout with re-pitched decks provide comfort and stability in adverse conditions. No shortage of storage across the back decks to keep an efficient workflow from anywhere in the boat. Quick access to tools and nets allow a clutter-free environment.

BRAVE THE WAVE

FULL-WIDTH TRANSOM STRENGTH

The 219 TFX, 210 TFX, and 2095 BTX are built with vacuum-molded transoms that span the entire width of the boat, ensuring unparalleled structural integrity and strength. This advanced construction process eliminates the need for fillers by setting the transoms directly into wet fiberglass. Not only does it create a seamless bond with the hull, but it also maximizes durability and longevity, even under the most demanding conditions. The full-width design enhances the boat's overall rigidity, improving performance, load distribution, and the ability to handle rough water. Additionally, it is engineered to withstand the added stress of kickers and other transom-mounted accessories, ensuring dependable performance season after season.

PREMIUM VINYL ESTER RESIN

We incorporate a premium Vinyl Ester Resin in the barrier coat underneath our high-quality gel coat. This adds rigidity to the hull and prevents hydrolysis, which is the number one cause of blistering and cracking. By creating a tougher, more resilient surface, this process ensures your boat maintains its structural integrity and showroom finish for years to come.

QUALITY GEL COAT APPLICATION

Strategic steps utilizing high atomization and a wet flake application allow us to achieve a finish of exceptional quality. We take our time during this process to ensure consistency and detail in every layer. This meticulous approach results in a gel coat that not only delivers an unmatched look and feel but also provides long-lasting durability.
